

Life is Sweet

Choc-o-late: the tip of the tongue taking a trip of three steps down the palate to tap, at three, on the teeth. Choc.O. Late. Here are the best – or most unusual – products to indulge in and enjoy ...

The Luxurious Italian one

Velvety smooth chocolate with flavours that envelop the mouth - white and black, lines and curves, pleasure and indulgence all melted into one.

Yes, we like!

On her Majesty's Silver Service

Prestat are chocolatiers to the Queen – and if these dark chocolate wafers with fiery chilli and lime are anything to go by, old Lizzie's got a very adventurous choc palette. Definite office dividers – about half loved 'em, the other half, erm, didn't ...

The Feel Good Factor

Chokolit was founded by 12 year old Louis Barnett who is now, at 18, Britain's youngest qualified chocolatier! Ethically sourced, gluten free, palm oil free, no preservatives or additives and with donations to charities. This is as guilt-free a pleasure as you can have whilst stuffing a bar of chocolate down your neck.

The Christmas Essential

Thornton's are one of the UK's oldest chocolate retailers and who hasn't, at some point, dived into a packed store for that last minute gift for aunt Myrtle? We loved this fondue-style dipping sauce that comes in a ready to serve glass. It couldn't be any simpler!

Love & Hate

You can be sure Marmite were expecting a plethora of mixed reviews when they launched a chocolate bar! There's an odd, counter-intuitive yeasty/umami bite to the product that will either get you online ordering a bucketload or looking like you've just gone through a bush tucker trial. Strange and unique – and a definitive acquired taste!
